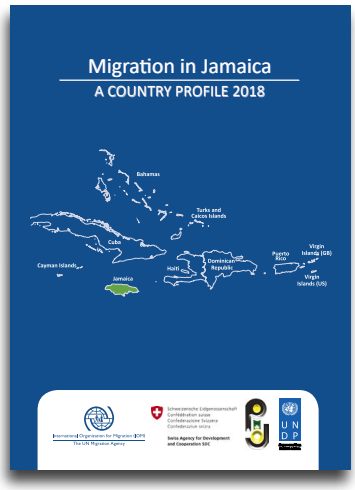
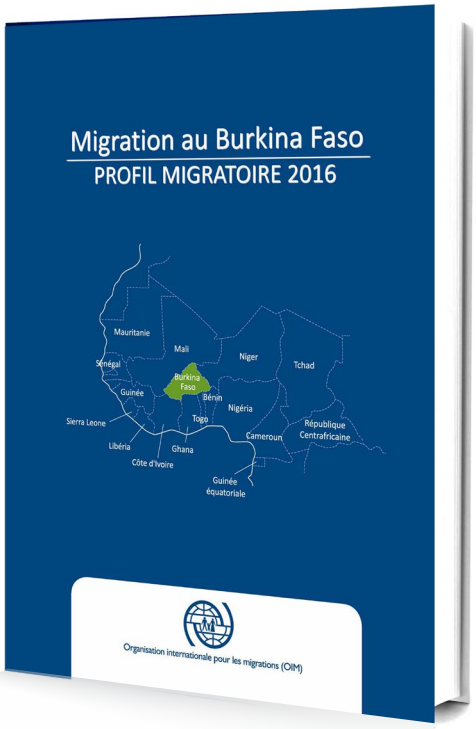
MIGRATION PROFILES

2018
JUNE





IOM produced a series of migration profiles with the financial support of external donors such as the European Union, the Swiss Federal Office for Migration (FOM), the Belgian Development Cooperation, the Government of Slovenia, the Sasakawa Endowment Fund, as well as the IOM Development Fund. These country reports bring together existing information from different sources in a structured manner, and provide a comprehensive overview of key international migration and socioeconomic development trends in selected countries in different regions.

The reports cover a range of statistics and other data related to immigration, emigration, return migration, remittances, labour migration and irregular migration, including trafficking and smuggling. Besides explaining some of the key factors underlying current migration patterns, the country reports also provide an assessment of the institutional and policy framework governing migration (domestic legislation, institutional actors, bi- and multilateral cooperation, etc.) and its effectiveness.

Drawing on the information and data presented, these country profiles indicate existing data gaps and possible strategies to improve migration statistics, and present key recommendations for policymakers to improve current migration management.

When preparing these Migration Profiles, particular attention was given to national ownership and sustainability. Migration Profiles should be a government-owned tool involving a process of consultation with policymakers in order to identify national priorities, objectives and scope of a country profile.
