Fatena's Story

FROM INSIDE SYRIA

2011 was a heavy year on Fatena, a 63-years-old mother of 11 (8 daughters and 3 sons). Not only did it mark the beginning of the Syrian crisis but also the end of Fatena's mobility as she had a stroke that resulted in her hemiplegia. 'I miss my siblings, my friends and mostly my 7-month-year-old granddaughter but I can't visit them because I can't walk anymore and I don't have a wheelchair,' explained Fatena.

Fatena lives with her husband and two single daughters in their house in the village of Kfarya - 5KM away from Idleb. Although their village escaped besiegement, it is still threatened by mortar shells that constantly land in. 'In this situation, cultivation no longer pays the bills,' said Fatena's husband. Fatena and her family depend on humanitarian assistance to survive.

On November 20th, 2014, Fatena was granted a wheelchair from the IOM. She is now able to restore some of the dignity and comfort that she has lost with her impairment.
