Kidnapping and staff detention were among the other significant incidents, affecting IOM operations, followed by vehicular accidents and incidents mostly in Africa and Asia. Other security incidents include office occupation, threats, intimidation, verbal harassment, civil unrest and natural hazards. Terrorism, armed conflict and civil war in various high-risk missions resulted in evacuation and relocation of international and national staff.

SSU BUDGET and MISSION FUNDING SUPPORT

SSU currently contributes yearly to be part of the UNSMS, enabling the Organization to fall back on UNDSS infrastructure for safety and security support globally with only deploying Security Officers in high-risk missions and during emergencies, which is a much more cost-effective approach compared to the Organization maintaining its own full blown safety security framework.

SSU supports missions worldwide for their security requirements in line with the UN Minimum Operational and Residential Security Standards thru Mission Funding Support. There is an increasing trend for requests and expenses on Mission Funding Support. The Funding Support doubled from 2009 to 2013. The bulk of funding support provided to the Missions was related to coverage of Minimum Operational Security Standards (MOSS), Minimum Operational Residential Security Standards (MORSS), Shared Agency Cost, Evacuation and Relocation entitlements as well as well as contribution to Field Security Officer salaries.

Funding requests from missions are continuously increasing in the last three years.
